COMMENTS ON REPERTOIRE REQUIREMENTS

Round I (Qualifying)

The Competition entrants shall select their own program for Round I at their discretion. The more vibrant compositions from the ensemble's repertoire, preferably in the ensemble's original arrangement, are encouraged.

Comment: Ensembles are invited to leave their own "calling card".

Round II

1. A composition from Round I program.

Comment: Here, once again, entrants may leave their "calling card", performing what they consider to be the most characteristic work from the ensemble's repertoire.

2. An original composition for the ensemble entering the Competition, based on any national musical theme (or several themes) from the entrant's native country; or a work based on a folk theme (or several themes) from any country. The work may be written in any form. The work may also be used for Round I.

Comment: In this context, the word "national" shall mean any musical theme originally from the country represented by the Competition entrant. This means that entrants can use not only folk music but any other musical genre, be it opera, a popular contemporary song or even a national anthem, provided that the theme(s) used to have strong associations with the culture of the country in question. An alternative to this is the performance of a work on the basis of a folk theme (or several themes) of any country – not necessarily the country that the entrant is representing. The work may be written in any form.

Round III

1. Competition entrant's original composition written in any form, based on a theme (themes) from a classical work. Repeating works from the Round II program is not permitted.

Comment: By "classical music" we mean the traditional definition of this term, including both classical music in the strict sense, and romanticism, but excluding such trends and techniques as abstractionism, serialism, etc.

2. Competition entrant's original composition written in any form, based on music by Russian composers.

Comment: Here, entrants may use one single theme, as well as several themes, even by different composers, combining them freely.

NOTE: We DO NOT REQUIRE all transcriptions, adaptations, and arrangements to be done directly by the ensemble, although this is encouraged.
